ETL LISTED MARK

North America Product Safety Certification

After decades of high quality, integrity, expertise, and an unwavering commitment to customer service, Intertek's ETL certification has become the fastest growing electrical safety certification mark in North America. With tens of thousands of product listings and millions of products sold in the U.S. and Canada each year, we've grown from a niche player to a recognized market leader.

The ETL Mark from Intertek is making conformity assessment more flexible and accommodating so that our clients no longer see product safety testing as strictly an obligation, but as a process that can add value to product development cycles.

Intertek is a Nationally Recognized Testing Laboratory (NRTL) staffed by a global force of engineers performing the same testing, listing, labeling, and follow-up inspection services as other providers. We are accredited by national organizations, agencies and regulatory bodies, including OSHA, to evaluate and list products in accordance with electrical safety standards.

What is an NRTL?

A Nationally Recognized Testing Laboratory (NRTL) is an independent laboratory recognized by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to test products to the specifications of applicable product safety standards. An NRTL's function is to provide independent evaluation, testing, and certification of any electrically operated or gas- and oil-fired product.

What is the difference between Certification Marks?

Certification Marks demonstrate that the product that bears it has met the requirements of widely-accepted product safety standards as determined through the independent testing of an OSHA-recognized NRTL. As part of that testing regimen, the product manufacturer has agreed to periodic follow-up inspections to verify continued compliance.

The only real difference between the Marks is in the service of the testing laboratory behind them.
